COASTAL NATURE IN LATVIA AND ESTONIA

🌊 In Latvia, the Baltic Coastal Hiking Route mainly goes along sandy beaches, in some places, rocky beaches, and for short stretches, through coastal meadows. There are well-trodden trails and small roads in the seaside forests. In some areas, the sand may be soft, which makes walking difficult.

🌊 In Estonia, the Baltic Coastal Hiking Route goes along the very seashore for around 100 km, mainly between Haapsalu and Tallinn. In other places, crossing the coastline becomes difficult as it is shaped by numerous capes, peninsulas, wetlands with reeds, floodplains, lagoons and shallow coves, which is why the remaining distance has to be covered via seaside trails, roads and along motor roads.

🌊 In cities and populated areas, the Baltic Coastal Hiking Route goes along pedestrian pavements.

🌊 The coastal terrain is mostly level and most of the Baltic Coastal Hiking Route is close to sea level.

🌊 In Latvia, steep bluffs can be found from Strante to Ošvalki Village and near Staldzene and along the rocky seacoast in Vidzeme, while cliffs can be seen in Harju County situated near Tallinn in Estonia.

🌊 The itinerary can be completed in all four seasons. Summer (June - August) is the tourist season in Latvia and Estonia, when more people come to the seacoast in comparison to other times of the year. As a result, accommodation near the sea can be fully booked some time in advance. In the autumn (end of August-October), you can see more colours when going through the woods, especially in Estonia: leaves are changing colour and you can find mushrooms, berries and nuts. During storms, amber is washed ashore in Latvia. The itinerary can also be completed in winter (December - March), doing booking in advance, as many services are not available at this time of year.

🌊 In the summer, the water temperature in the sea can reach +18; +20 °C or more, so it is pleasant to walk barefoot on the sandy sections of the coast and swim in the bathing areas.

🌊 Dangerous natural calamities are not characteristic to the Baltic Sea littoral. Strong storms occur rarely and usually in the autumn or winter seasons.

🌊 In Latvia, the dominant wind direction is from the West. In the Baltic Sea littoral of Latvia, the wind is noticeably stronger, so the hike from the Lithuanian border to Kolka may be more comfortable in this direction with a tail wind at your back.

🌊 There are no high or low tides in the Baltic Coastal Hiking Route that would limit movement along the seashore or make it unsafe.

🌊 The coast of the sea is ever changing and the same place may look different every next time you go there. The steep bluffs are washed away by storms, the beach changes, a sandy beach can be replaced by pebbles or even stones, but at other times the pebbles may be covered by sand washed on top of them.
